

Clear

Astronauts on the International Space Station have an amazingly clear view of the Earth from 300 kilometres high. Chlorine (Cl) chemistry is vital to the production of polycarbonate, the clear, transparent plastic used to make the astronauts' visors. These protect them from light, heat and space dust. For more information on the many applications of chlorine, visit www.eurochlor.org

Chlorine – an essential element of life

